University Preparing For Homecoming Nov. 14

Dr. C. F. Thomas

Walter Ledet

E. H. Gilson

Thomas, Ledet, Gilson Are Slated For Membership In Hall of Fame; Homecoming Induction Scheduled

Three of the most illustrious sports figures in Northwestern's 86-year history have been selected for membership in the institution's Graduate "N" Club Athletic Hall of Fame.

Named to the shrine were Dr. Charles "Red" Thomas, Northwestern's first All-American basketball player and later a successful coach at the college; Walter Ledet, football All-American in the 1930's who went on to become an outstanding football and track coach, and E. H. Gilson quarterback for Northwestern's first undefeated, untied football team in 1939.

Dr. Allen Bonnette, associate professor of physical education and chairman of the Hall of Fame selection committee, said the three members will be inducted during ceremonies at Northwestern's homecoming Nov. 14.

Thomas, now vice-president of academic affairs at Northwestern, won All-America honors in 1941. He scored in double figures from his forward position that year and was a strong rebounder despite the fact that he was only 5-foot-6.

An outstanding athlete at Texarkana Junior College before transferring to Northwestern, Thomas led the Demons in assists and steals and was a noted playmaker. He played at NSC during the 1940 and 1941 seasons.

Halls of Fame are nothing new to Thomas. He was inducted into the national Helms Hall of Fame in 1957 and is also a member of the Louisiana Sports Hall of Fame.

Thomas played for Northwestern in the NAIA Tournament in 1941 and was named as the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Returning to Northwestern as head basketball coach in 1950, Thomas won 129 games and lost only 76 during his eight year tenure. His teams won two Gulf States Conference championships.

Continuing his athletic competition in recent years, Thomas won numerous badminton Championships, including the National Veterans title and the Southern Open and Veterans Championships.

Ledet in 1936 became the first Northwestern athlete to win All-American honors. He was a guard on the Demon football team and a record-breaking weight man for the track and field squad.

Immediately after graduation in 1938, he was appointed as freshman football coach, intramural director and instructor in health and physical education at NSC. He also served for some 20 years as Northwestern's athletic trainer.

In 1952, Ledet became head track coach at Northwestern and led the NSU track and field team to six straight conference championships, a record which has never been matched. He was named coach of the year each season.

It was Ledet who, in the early 1940's played a major role in the establishment of the school's Graduate N Club, an organization of more than 1,000 athletic lettermen. Ledet served as secretary-treasurer of the group for 21 years and later spent two years as Graduate N Club president.

When Prather Coliseum was completed at Northwestern in 1963, Ledet left coaching to become coliseum manager and continued as a member of the health and physical education department faculty. In 1967, he became assistant registrar and is now registrar at Northwestern.

Gilson came to Northwestern from Fair Park High School in 1936. He was outstanding in both football and track. In football, Gilson was quarterback and line-backer, and he placed consistently in track meets in the mile run, two-mile run and 880.

Selected as co-captain of the football team, Gilson quarterbacked the Demons to 11 straight victories. Northwestern gave up only 18 points during the season while scoring 195 points.

He was named to Who's Who and the Senior Hall of Fame and won the college's intramural light-heavyweight boxing championship in both 1938 and 1939.

Gilson has served two years as president of the Northwestern Alumni Association and is now in his seventh term as president of the Graduate N Club. He is also executive vice-president of the NSU Demon Club and was one of the

FOCUS on NSU

by Jerry Pierce

(Reprinted from the Natchitoches Times)

Shadows spill over the Northwestern quadrangle like giant ink blots. The sun sinks to its bed, and a silent breeze stirs.

I must look a little strange sitting here on this cement bench, but who's looking. Ten years ago, it would have taken a machine gun to get a seat in this square at sunset.

But progress has taken its toll here. Smart, sophisticated new buildings have sprung up on the other side of campus, shoving this place into the darkness of the past.

Oh, they still have classes here, and students pass through. Few of them are aware, though, that a decade ago, this was the very heart of the campus.

But the sights and sounds of this spot still live in the memories of thousands. I have watched them at Homecoming and on weekend visits. They always take time to return here.

Many have been robbed of their youth, but their eyes still sparkle when they walk through these shadows.

Some are stunned that Guardia is gone. They had not heard how fire, on a cold night three years ago, had snuffed out the life of the fine old building. But Caldwell is still there, and the library, and Warren Easton. That's enough to stir nostalgia.

They remember like it was yesterday how Miss Catherine Winters stood right on this spot and told how the North won the Civil War but had to grit her teeth to admit it.

And on this very ground where salvage crews raked away the bones of Guardia Hall, Alfred Ducournau worked for years to explain the marvels of science to young listeners who wondered if science would ever really have any meaning in this world.

Even as I sit here now, I wonder how that wisp of smog could possibly look so much like the trail of smoke that came from Professor Nelken's window as he puffed that smelly old corn cob pipe.

And they tell me that it was right there on that sidewalk that President Tison had a dozen rotten eggs dumped on his head from the third floor of Guardia. Some people say Bill Dodd did it. Mr. Dodd doesn't admit it, but he laughs about the incident like a man with a secret.

The flagpole is gone. Everybody notices that. We're not any less patriotic. It's just that the pole has been moved across the campus... where the action is. And those khaki-clad, crewcut young fellows still hoist the flag every morning.

I remember lines backed up as far as that flagpole trying to get into Caldwell to register. We soon learned that the purpose of those long lines was to somehow reach Dean Jones or Dean Dugdale to have them sign some form or another.

Many of us have leaned against those old columns and wondered what the hell happened to the rest of the building. We learned in time.

From this very bench, I have often heard Mary McEniry through the open window. No air-conditioning then, you know. How that woman loved the classics. She talked about Homer and Virgil and those guys like they were relatives.

We used to hear Eve Mouton from down here too. That mellow, luxurious voice of hers. Speaking in some foreign tongue... French or something. We couldn't understand a word she said, but it sounded pretty.

For years, they had commencement ceremonies right out here. If it rained, they could retreat to the Caldwell auditorium. And many a celebrity has spoken from those library steps. The crowds would gather here in the quadrangle to listen. Even now, after all these years, the applause still echos through this square—or maybe it's just the wind in the trees.

There's nobody here now. It's dark and quiet. Like an old book that's already been read, this place has been put aside but not forgotten. Like a rumpled suit that has gone out of style, it has been moved to the back of the closet.

Progress is wonderful, of course, and we are proud of ours, but progress has no mercy on some of the good things and good places...and this place is one of them.

Now I understand why they come back here to Homecoming...and why their eyes are misty.

Bull Is Donated By Ex-Governor

The only Register of Merit bull in Louisiana, JH Beau Promino 710, has been donated to the Northwestern Department of Agriculture by former governor James A. Noe of Monroe.

Noe purchased the horned hereford bull in 1963 from the Morlunda Farms in West Virginia and moved the animal to Whitehall Plantation in Monroe to become the heard sire of one of North Louisiana's leading hereford herds.

President Arnold R. Kilpatrick of Northwestern, who accepted the animal from Noe, said the bull will be used at Northwestern for production and breeding purposes on the NSU farm.

Northwestern has a 550-acre experimental farm. The herd of 182 cattle includes 40 herefords. Dr. Zoel Daughtrey, head of the Department of Agriculture, said the bull will be mated with selected brood cows from the registered herd of horned hereford cattle on the NSU farm.

JH Beau Promino 710 was bred by Grassland Hereford Ranch in Montana. In his first year of production, eight of his sons and seven of his daughters all subsequently won Register of Merit in 1962.

Prior to the herd's sale in 1963, JH Beau Promino 710 was senior sire at Oak Brook Farm in Illinois. He was the nation's third-ranking sire among the 1963 Register of Merit.

Sired by King Promise 44th, the 710th is credited with such characteristics as good head, good color, good style, and excellent fleshing qualities.

Daughtrey said the bull will be used in an effort to upgrade the Northwestern herd. The bull will be kept in a small pasture near the dairy farm building on the main campus, and plans are being made to show the animal at fairs and livestock exhibits in North Louisiana.

Academic Grants Offered at NSU

Northwestern has begun accepting applications for 20 academic scholarships which will be available to freshmen entering the university in the fall of 1971.

Applicants must be high school seniors who have maintained a "B" average and rank in the top 25 percent of their graduating classes.

The 20 grants to academically-outstanding students are made available to Northwestern by the State Board of Education.

Forms for applicants for the scholarships have been mailed to high school principals and counselors throughout the state. Schools which did not receive the material may write or call Northwestern for the forms and information sheets.

Dr. Tandy McElwee, head of the Department of Testing and chairman of the NSU Academic Scholarship Committee, said applications must be completed and returned to the Northwestern Academic Scholarship Committee before Jan. 1, 1971.

Students receiving the academic grants will be given a maximum of $4,000 during their four-year college careers. The State Board of Education grants were raised this year from $400 to $500 a semester.

McElwee said anyone making application for Northwestern's academic grants must have their scores reported to the university.

Interested students may apply to take the ACT examinations on the Dec. 12 test date at Northwestern.

Additional information on the academic scholarships and the ACT testing dates may be obtained by writing Dr. Tandy McElwee, Chairman, Northwestern State University Academic Scholarship Committee.

Indians Edge Demons; Tech Next Opponent

A last minute goal-line stand and a 28-yard touchdown run with a fumble recovery enabled Northeast Louisiana to nip Northwestern State 21-17 before a packed house of 8,100 at Monroe's Brown Stadium.

The series win was the first in 10 years and halted Louisiana's longest collegiate winning streak at 7. It was the Gulf States Conference opener for both schools.

Northwestern had won its last four games in 1969 and its previous three this year—Florence State 42-21, Stephen F. Austin 9-7 and Southwestern Oklahoma 22-14.

The Demons led Northeast 17-7

early in the fourth quarter, but saw the margin cut to 17-14 on a TD pass midway in the period. Moments later Indian halfback Keith Moncrief recovered a Northwestern fumble in mid-air and raced 28 yards into the end zone for the winning points.

Quarterback Mike Pool completed four passes in the final minute and a half to push the Demons 48 yards to Northeast's three. But on fourth and goal, Pool was halted at the two on a sprint out with 15 seconds left.

A quarterback snafu provided Northeast an early 7-0 lead, but Dennis Wilkinson's 27-yard field goal narrowed it to 7-3 in the second period.

In the third quarter, halfback Tommy Wallis ran over from the four to give Northwestern a 10-7 lead. Early in the fourth period, fullback Richard Ware widened the margin with a two yard run.

Ware led Northwestern in rushing with 94 yards, while Pool passed for 104. The Demons entered as the eighth ranked in the NAIA poll.

The week before in their win over Southwestern Oklahoma Ware rushed for a school record 186 yards on 34 carries and earned GSC Back-of-the-Week honors. He scored twice, while Pool ran 15 yards for the other TD and Wilkinson booted a 40-yard field goal.

Southwestern, the nation's fourth ranked NAIA team last year, closed the gap late, after the Demons moved to a 22-7 lead early in the third period.

Defensive tackle Walter Elder, a two-time all-GSC pick, had big defensive games against Northeast and Southwestern.

Northwestern's next game will be its annual State Fair clash Oct. 24 at Shreveport against Louisiana Tech, the defending Gulf States Conference champion.

Safety Al Dodd Chosen League's Best For 1960's

Northwestern State safety Al Dodd was selected the Gulf States Conference's defensive player of the decade for the 1960's in a poll recently conducted by the Louisiana Collegiate Sports Information Association.

A group of coaches and writers unanimously tabbed Dodd for the honor. In his four year Demon career that ended in 1966, Dodd intercepted 31 passes, a GSC and NAIA record. He picked off nine passes in three different years.

Two other Northwestern players, end Jackie Smith and linebacker Sammy Joe Odom, were selected to the all-GSC team of the decade.

Northwestern players also receiving votes for the all-GSC team included Vic Nyvall, Dick Reding, Shelby Dickie, Jerry Fowler, Bobby Koncak, Leslie Robertson, Eddie Mittlebron, Gary McCrary, Randy Brodnax, David Lovich, Corwyn Aldredge, Walter Elder, Gerald Malley, Kenny Thompson, Kenny Hrapmann, David Smith, Dennis Wilkinson and Wayne Walker.

Leonard Richardson . . . Strong Demon Tackle

Husky Richardson Progresses As Interior Blocker For NSU

He's dedicated, talented and more than anything else, he wants to do his part in helping Northwestern State win the Gulf States Conference football championship.

So what makes offensive tackle Leonard Richardson of Shreveport any different from the other Demon players?

First, the aggressive senior is the biggest player (6-2, 236) on the team, and he knows how to throw his weight around.

Secondly, Richardson was unfortunate in that he lost a year's eligibility when he broke a leg in the first quarter of the opening game of his sophomore season. He now has complete mobility in both legs.

And finally, the former Woodlawn High star is the only player on the Northwestern roster born in Kalamazoo, Mich.

"At times, Leonard is an outstanding tackle," said Demon coach Glenn Gossett. An occasion would be Northwestern's 22-14 win over Southwestern Oklahoma earlier this season in which Richardson graded 82 per cent blocking, highest on the team.

Used as a guard during his freshman year, Richardson was moved to tackle as a sophomore and looked as though he would have a fine season prior to the injury. He recovered for his junior campaign but did not have complete mobility.

"Richardson is much improved over last year," Gossett says. "He's beginning to realize he has the size and ability to be a most capable offensive lineman."

"I want to do everything I can to help us have a great year," says Richardson. "It's a great thing just to be playing for the Demons."

Winning is important to Richardson because he's not been accustomed to losing. A three-year starter in high school, he played a major role on Woodlawn's state finalist team in 1965 and the Knights' 11-1 record the following year.

Demons' Cagers Working; Slate Appears Rugged

Eighteen players, six of them lettermen, are presently undergoing conditioning drills as Northwestern State's basketball team prepares for its Dec. 1 opener with Tulane University at New Orleans.

The playing candidates include two returning starters, John Janese and Marvin Willett, from last year's team and two promising newcomers, Jessie Horner and Vernon Wilson.

Northwestern finished 13-13 last year and 6-6 in the Gulf States Conference, and participated for the third straight year in the District 30 NAIA playoffs.

This year's Demon schedule is one of the most ambitious ever. It reads:
